Our process of developmental editing involves the following:

The Developmental Editing is the most comprehensive editing of a manuscript. You can rest assured that your book will be ready for the world to read after it undergoes our Developmental Edit. For nonfiction books, the chief editor will confirm the following: your content is relatable to the target audience; the book is organized; lists, and tables are used properly throughout the book; and concepts are developed appropriately. For fiction books, the editor will ensure the plot flows well, the characters are consistent, and the whole story fits together.

Phase One: Developmental Edit

A developmental editor gives your manuscript a high-level review at the paragraph, chapter, and book levels. The editor provides comments throughout the manuscript, to identify areas of your work that may need overall revisions.

Phase Two: Content Edit

After any major content changes are made, the editor will continue the editing process with a Content Edit. The Content Edit is included in the Developmental Editing package. During this phase, errors in spelling, grammar, punctuation and sentence structure will be caught and corrected.

Phase Three: Quality Review

After you have reviewed your Content Edit and submitted the updated version of your manuscript, we will perform a Quality Review service to check your work. This will not review the entire manuscript. Instead, an editor will check over all the revisions you made to the manuscript after the Content Edit in order to eliminate any errors or problems added in during your revision.

Sometimes developmental edits reveal major plot problems or instances where the plot falls flat or needs to be fleshed out. Like with any type of edit, however, the editor is merely a sounding board. It is up to the writer to apply the suggested edits, and it may involve multiple conversations to smooth out any wrinkles uncovered in the review process.

Process of Republication and Revision involves the following:

- Rebranding of the book:
  - Once the manuscript is received, we right away proceed with independently republish of your book under your name.
  - Fixing the underline issues of self-publishing company fulfilled.
  - Pass the one of the parameters and guidelines since Traditional Publishers are NOT accepting endorsements that are being self-published.
  - The independently published book we will produce would have its own Style Guide Logo

- Legal Registration:
  - Registration to Book of Congress
  - New ISBN (International Standard Book Number) and Control Number

Forecasted time Frame:

Project Scheme:	Target Month Application	Expected Timeframe:
Developmental Editing	Once manuscript is received	It will take 7-9 weeks max to complete Developmental Editing (not including the time needed for author revision) depending on the editors work queue, the complexity work, and author turnaround time for each stage.
Independently Rebranding of the Book and Revision	After developmental editing is fulfilled.	5-7weeks.
